The Day of the Fur Hat

THE day of the fur hat, which was due to arrive at least a month ago, was postponed by October weather which persisted in lingering with us into December. But every hat has its day and, come what will, our fur hats are a part of the play in January and February anyway. They are too attractive to neglect and this season they took their responsibilities lightly; for almost all of them are only partly made of fur. We have fur and velvet, often with embellishment of sparkling bead embroidery, fur and brilliant, rich brocades, fur and embroidered fabrics; the fur providing brims for all sorts of gay and interesting crowns.

The furs best liked are the short-haired velvety pelts, as Hudson seal, mole skin, beaver, caracul, sable, squirrel and mink. Ermine appears occasionally, but nearly always as a trimming, and very handsome velvet hats with knots or bows of fur, or emplacements of fur panels on the brims, are shown among other fur hats. Occasionally the rule of fur brims and fabric crowns is reversed in models that have fur crowns and velvet brims. The handsome hat at the top of the group pictured employs squirrel fur for its coronet and shirred gray velvet for a crown. Such hats are often finished with a sparkling pin or ornament of rhinestones suggestive of frost. The soft, warm-looking hat at the left has a brim that suggests the cozy poke bonnet and is trimmed with ribbon and fur balls. It might be made in any of the millinery furs. At the right a turban with a wide upturned brim of fur has a sectional crown of velvet and boasts a lovely plume of curled ostrich at the back. Such hats as these have real values to offer; for good furs outlast many seasons, if cared for, and may be made to serve on other hats.

Children at the Bread Kitchens

Three and a half million children in eastern and central Europe wait, gaunt and pinched like these, at the American kitchens for the hot soup and bread that mean life to them. In the winters since the Armistice, America has been the one friend that had food to give them. It is a common sight in Europe today to see a child five or six years old whose head has not healed. With a healthy well fed baby the skull should close before two years. America must see these children through the rigors of another winter, and to that end eight great relief organizations have combined into the European Relief Council. They seek to raise $33,000,000 to save this generation of Europe from death by starvation and the diseases that come with under-feeding.
